NEWS AND COMMENTS.

THE Emperor of Germany is staying at his grandmother's place in England, and the old lady is giving him the best she's got in the shop.

THE Greensboro Daily Record has recently been enlarged—an evidence of prosperity which it is gratifying to see, for the paper well merits it. The Record is bright, very indefatigable in gathering the news, and capable of attractively presenting it to its readers, and will, if sustained as the Greensboro people ought to sustain it, prove a powerful factor in the city's progress.

WHAT varied and intense emotions must have stirred the soul of the unhappy ex-Empress EUGENIE as she received the children of the late Prince NAPOLEON at San Remo the other day! Her cordiality was not misplaced, for their mother, Princess CLOTHILDE, was the dear friend she had at the court of the Empire. It is said that Prince VICTOR NOIR is to inherit the large fortune of EUGENIE.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, WILLIAM ROCKEFELLER and eight of their associate directors of the New Haven R. R. have been indicted for homicide by a grand jury of New York the specification being that, by the use of the deadly car-stove" on that road, five persons lost their lives in the fearful Fourth Avenue tunnel accident in February. It was doubtless a surprise to these individuals, most of them are millionaires; and, as the probability is that they will come through after some serious mulcting of the pocket, they will have been taught a salutary lesson.

WELL, it looks as if Mr. GREEN B. RAUM'S "row was settled" at last! He has been more than once lately accused of very "shady" practices, but his last Charlton Heights scheme in which, assisted by his son, he has been booming a dreary Washington suburb, to the cost of unwary speculators, and using his official position to give weight to his representations (or misrepresentations)—is a clear case of swindling. With a decent administration Mr. RAUM would go, and "stand not on the order of his going;" but a government and President that can stand QUAY, and DOLEY, and DELAMATER, possess stomachs not easily turned.

THE Italian government's present state of feeling is undignified and unseemly—more like sulking and pouting than anything else. ITALY demands guarantees from the United States which, from the very structure of our government and the sovereignty of the States, it is impossible for the administration to give, and resolutely shuts his eyes to the fact that the murderous agents of the Mafia were lynched in New Orleans not because they were Italians but because they were assassins. The recall of BARON DE FAVA is serious, but it is not tantamount to a desire for war, and we look for an allayment of the excitement after the froth has blown off the surface.

EARL GRANVILLE, leader of the Liberal party in the British Parliament, died on the 31st ult., aged 76 years. His public career was nearly as long as his life, but he has been most prominently before the English people since the administration of Lord RUSSELL, by whom Earl GRANVILLE was made President of the Board of Trade, thus arousing the vehement opposition of JOHN BRIGHT—which opposition was, however, subsequently withdrawn. He was a very strong supporter of GLADSTONE, for whom he made more than one powerful canvass, and ranked as one of the ablest speakers in Parliament—especially happy in impromptu and post prandial efforts.

IF we recollect aright, one of the last public utterances of the late SAMUEL J. TILDEN was an able, statesmanlike paper which was published in a prominent Northern periodical, clearly showing the weakness and inadequacy of our coast defenses. The facts incisively set forth in that and kindred articles would come home to us unpleasantly should Italy send her armor-clad war-vessels over here to attack New York and divers other American cities into "smithereens." It is a little humiliating to think that the United States—which, to use school-boy fisticuff vernacular, could whip Italy with one hand tied behind the back of it has not, with its whole naval armament, the ability to stand against this second-rate European power for half a day in a sea-fight.

IT is not a little risky to assume the role of prophet—especially if one put oneself down in black and white. Nearly half a century ago (in 1845) Lord NUGENT, a zealous, philanthropic, big-hearted man—and always wrong-headed when he was biggest-hearted—predicted in England that fifteen years from that time (in 1860) the barbarism of capital punishment would have been repudiated with horror by the whole civilized world, and that nowhere in christendom would the gibbet exist except it be some rotting scaffold with rusting chains at Montfaucon, in France, or on the chalky cliffs near Deal, the smugglers' and pirates' hanging-ground, in England; and the editor of Chambers Journal—in which the noble seer's propheecy had publication with a great flourish of trumpets—"went halves" with his optimistic correspondent. The time of probation has expired, with over thirty years added on, and the world is not yet ready to do without a little wholesome hanging. On the contrary, the harvest of cut-throats is still so bountiful that legislatures are devising new modes of capital punishment, and are calling to their aid that mysterious Ajax of nature's forces, electricity, in the execution of the law's penalties, while now and then "Judge Lynch," "fighting for his own hand," grows impatient with the slow movements of the "Jack Ketch" of the courts, and swings off a batch of criminals here and there to meet the popular demand.

A Roman Maiden's Remains.

Pall Mall Gazette.]

During some recent excavations in Rome, in the ancient gardens of Domitian, a coffin was discovered, which, from its contents, has proved one of the most interesting ever brought to light. It contained the remains of a young girl—Crepereia Tryphæna by name, according to the inscription—and a bas-relief on the coffin represents her sleeping on a bier with her head inclined to the left shoulder. An older woman is represented sitting at the foot of the bier, while at the head stands a young man in an attitude of mourning.

The coffin seems to have been filled with water, by a fortunate accident, from an indefinite period, which has aided greatly in the preservation of the remains. The head is still covered with long, fine hair, which has completely resisted decay—a resistance that is very characteristic; and in the museum at York, England, there is a mass of human hair, still coiled in a classical knot, and held in place by pins of jet, from the neighboring deposits at Whitby, all the rest of the body of the ancient Roman woman having crumbled to dust. York was an important British-Roman settlement, and this interesting relic is doubtless of approximately the same age as that of the Roman maiden described above.

It is evident from the contents of the coffin that Crepereia Tryphæna was betrothed—probably to the youth represented in the bas-relief. A crown of myrtle leaves, sacred to Venus, was found at her head, fastened by a silver clasp very much oxidized, from which fact we may assume that the metal was an impure alloy. Several gold rings were also found: one set with a piece of dark-colored glass; another with an onyx engraved in relief with the word "Filetus" —probably the name of her lover.

Probably the most remarkable object of all was a wooden doll, which had evidently been laid in the coffin as a souvenir of the childhood of the girl. It is about a foot in height, carved with considerable artistic skill, and, curiously enough, the joints are articulated just as may be seen in dolls of the present day. The hair is represented as arranged in a classic knot, and the features are said to greatly resemble those of the Empress Faustina.

Such a discovery as this renders the life of the Romans much more real to us than all the ruins or statues or records of battle they have left. The Roman history, as we read it, is a sad record of war, bloodshed and crime; but the great mass of the people must have lived out their lives as at present—with little reference to the quarrels of emperors, generals and politicians—and when Crepereia Tryphæna passed away the brightness went out of the world of her Roman lover, as it has in such cases in all succeeding centuries, and doubtless will for ages to come.

Found after Sixteen Years.

Wm. Foster, a well-to-do Chicago man, has just found and identified, at Fostoria, Ohio, a daughter who was stolen from him sixteen years ago. The child disappeared when she was three years old, and learned the story of her real parentage only a few days ago.

At the time his little daughter was stolen Mr. Foster lived in Indianapolis with his wife and this daughter, the only child. In his employ was a woman who did the cooking and house-work. She took a great liking to the girl baby, and one day the woman was missing, and, with her, the little girl. Diligent search was made in every direction for the missing child by the parents, but without avail. She was never heard of until her father received tidings of her about two weeks ago, at which time Mr. Foster received an anonymous communication, stating that the child had been stolen by the servant, who boarded a train, and went to Ohio. She abandoned the little one on the train between Richmond, Ind., and Sonora, Ohio. The little girl was found by the train men, and was turned over to the station-master, who took her home and cared for her for several days, when she was taken in charge by a Mrs. Taylor, of Louisburg, near Springfield, Ohio. She kept the child for awhile, but it was finally adopted by a wealthy farmer named Reynolds at Fostoria.

Mr. Reynolds, being well-off, reared the child as he would his own, giving this adopted daughter all the advantages possible in the way of education. She has grown to womanhood, gives promise of being very beautiful, and would have eventually become heiress of all her adopted father's wealth had not a good fairy held in reserve a real father with a fortune of his own.

The stealing of her baby and the consequent anxiety so preyed upon the mother's health that she died soon after the child's abduction, and the father removed to Chicago, where, engaging in business, he amassed a fortune. He was almost stunned when he received the intelligence that his long-lost child was alive, and immediately started for Fostoria to claim her.

Sudden.

Presence of mind is not always monopolized by the brave and wise, nor is it uniformly cultivated and exercised for great and good purposes.

Several of the pupils in a certain country district-school determined not to learn geography. The teacher believed that they were old enough to take up that branch of schooling, and she accordingly called one of the oldest boys to her desk, and spoke to him about the necessity of a knowledge of his own and other countries.

"I sha'n't study g'ogrerfy till I git ready," growled the youngster.

The teacher, rising quickly, seized him by the collar, with hickory upraised, when the young rascal hastily added: "But I'm ready now!"

The English Crown's Rich Perquisites.

Philadelphia Record.]

The total sum that annually reverts to the crown of England by reason of the owners dying intestate without known heirs, lapsed legacies, etc., is about $500,000. The exact figure for the year 1889 was $493,995, as stated by the treasury solicitor in the return presented to Parliament last session. Of the balances in hand, a portion is from time to time handed over to the exchequer on account of "crown share of estates," and a part for grants to successful claimants.

Bismarck's Fall and Old Age.

Chicago Times.]

Never has history furnished a better illustration of the uncertainty and instability of place and power than in the case of the great ex-Chancellor, Prince Bismarck, of Germany. Bismarck's fall is complete. His ruthless genius consolidated seemingly incoherent states into a great empire whose reigning monarch refused him the scant courtesy of a prefunctory message of congratulation on New Year's Day. Bismarck's fall is as complete and pathetic, viewed only as to himself, as was Wolsey's. This stroke only was spared him—the hand that signed his warrant of banishment was not the king's he served. Bismarck was the mightiest monarch in Europe. The old Kaiser, who, in the fullness of years, went to his account—master, apparently, of the greatest military power of Europe—was Bismarck's figure-head. It was Bismarck, not William, nor William's great captain, Von Moltke, who, conquering at Sedan, destroyed the French Empire, and crystalized the German aspiration, long-expressed, for German unity. He was, in name, Chancellor of the empire. In fact, he was its spirit. Greater than Wolsey, or Ximenes, who saved Spain to Charles V., or the Cardinal of Henry VIII.'s reign, his fall is complete, humiliating, and if it differs from Wolsey's it is only the difference of the customs and manners of the nineteenth from those of the sixteenth century. He has felt the "killing frost" of kingly ingratitude. He has bitterly experienced "how wretched is that poor man who hangs on princes' favors." And having fallen, he has fallen "like Lucifer, never to rise again." Like the English Cardinal, Bismarck "trod the ways of glory and sounded all the depths and shoals of honor," and may well exclaim with him upon the verge of the grave:

Had I but served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Bismarck's proud heart is broken. There is nothing for him now but death. Were he of the ecclesiastic order he might now seek his conventual brethren, the humble monks whence he sprang, saying, with the neglected and disgraced Englishman:

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye:
Give him a little earth for charity.

Nothing is left to Bismarck but a grave. The grandson of the Emperor whom he created and ruled frowns upon him. An eager generation, impatient of the check of the elders, pushes him from his stool. Yet a little while, and the melancholy end. And if people will say, "His faults lie gently on him," well and good. That is all he can hope for now. He is as dead to the world of activities as any of the mighty who have passed from earth. "No sound can awake him to glory again."

A Romance of the Late War.

New York Herald.]

Here is one of the finest bits of romance developed during "our recent unpleasantness." It is a gem in its way, and can hardly be duplicated.

Mary Dewey, an Ohio girl, was betrothed to Benjamin Brown at the time when Lincoln made a call for volunteers. Brown was a patriot, full of fire, love for the old flag "and all like that, you know." Not even the bliss of domestic life could dampen his ardor. He grew restless, despondent, melancholy, and at last desperate. He was bound to enlist, was ashamed to skulk at home and shirk his duty when his friends and companions were going to the front, so he enlisted, donned the uniform and went into camp. He was a private in in the Twenty-sixth Ohio.

Shortly afterward a spruce young fellow, who hailed from Cleveland, joined his company. He was a trig, neat, dashing youth, but it didn't take Benjamin long to discover that the newcomer was his sweet heart, then known as Charles E. Dewey.

The regiment did good service, and in many a skrimmage the two lovers fought side by side. In one of these engagements Mary was seriously wounded. She was taken to the hospital, and Benjamin somehow got detailed as her nurse. During this trying ordeal her sex was unrevealed, and when she recovered she again took her place in the ranks.

When the cruel war was over the two returned to their native State. Mary laid aside her togs, the minister was called in, and a very interesting ceremony was performed.

Now Mary claims a pension, not as the widow of Benjamin, but on her own account, and her wound, which permanently disabled her, is brought in evidence of her right to some of Uncle Sam's money. She is a veritable veteran, and wants her dues. She ought to get them.

The Obelisks of Cleopatra.

Christian at Work.]

Although the Egyptian obelisk in the Central Park, New York, is slowly disintegrating, that on the Thames Embankment in England seems to be bearing without injury the vicissitudes of the English climate, so unlike that of Egypt. This seems to be due to the peculiar composition of the granite of which it, unlike all the other known obelisks, was cut, and which is marked by the total absence of mica. In all other granites this readily destructible material exists. Centuries have passed away since this ancient monument was erected by Pharaoh Rameses II. at the main gateway of his great temple at On, the Heliopolis of the Greeks.

There it stood for eighteen centuries, and was, about twenty-three years B. C., removed by order of Cleopatra to the palace she was erecting at Alexandria for her friend and constant visitor, Julius Cæsar. The architect appointed by her was Pontius, the father of Pilate, the Governor of Judea. The rounded corners of the bases of these two obelisks had doubtless been chipped off by the gatekeepers at On and sold to the pilgrim visitors.

Pontius Aachitante had eight bronze crabs cast, and placed them under the rounded corners of the stones, and on the big claw of one of the two crabs which alone remained was, when the pedestal was cleared of its surrounding sand, found this inscription: "In the sixth year of Augustus Cæsar, I, Barbarus, Prefect of Egypt, caused these obelisks to be erected by Pontius, the architect." Since then another nineteen centuries have passed, and even this 3,700 years of weathering has not erased one single portion of the hieroglyphs.

Famous London Streets.

New York Mail and Express.]

Pall Mall is the great street of the London (England) clubs. The stately clubhouses that line it make it more nearly a street of palaces than any other thoroughfare in smoky London. Some of the famous club-houses in Pall Mall are the Oxford and Cambridge, the Conservative Carlton Club, next the big War Office; the Reform Club, which is a Liberal stronghold; the Athenæum, with its long list of literary and scientific members; the Senior Army and Navy Club, the Junior Carlton, and the Marlborough, which is the especial pet of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales.

Marlborough House itself, the residence of the Prince, is on Pall Mall, though you cannot see it from that street. It stands within walls at the corner of the road into St. James Park and faces St. James Palace. From St. James Pall Mall extends to the Haymarket. It has been a favorite street for British wits and politicians for a couple of centuries at least. The beaux and wits of Queen Anne's time frequented it. The London world of politics and fashion claims it now. It is a great drive and promenade for the most noted people of England.

Piccadilly is another pet street of London fashion. It is at once a society and business street, and in its eastern portion the double rows of houses that line it are almost entirely given to trade. In the western part, where the stately private mansions are, there are also many stores or "shops," as our British cousins call them. In Piccadilly, or hard by it, lived in their time Scott, Byron, Lord Palmerston and the "Iron Duke." Apsley House, the residence of the Duke of Wellington, is a big, plain structure, not in the least imposing. The mansion of the Rothschilds and the famous Devonshire House are on Piccadilly. The architecture of the street is a perfect medley. In the "season" it is one of the brightest and liveliest thoroughfares of London.

Regent street, which crosses Piccadilly from the north, and runs into Waterloo place before it reaches Pall Mall, is one to which Britishers "point with pride" as the handsomest and most strictly fashionable street in London. It is the broadest street in the city except one, and that is Portland. Regent street is more uniform architecturally than either Piccadilly or Pall Mall. When the "sea on" is on it is thronged in the afternoon with the pick of London fashion. From 4 till 6 in the afternoon two great tides of splendid turnouts ebb and flow through it. All sorts of pedestrians are on the sidewalk, from the fashionable exquisite to the street arab, and from the Duchess to the working-girl.

First Public Mention of the Gold Discovery.

Century.]

In the spring of 1848 San Francisco, a village of about seven hundred inhabitants, had two newspapers, the Californian and the California Star, both weeklies. The first printed mention of the gold discovery was a short paragraph in the former, under date of the 15th of March, stating that a gold mine had been found at Sutter's Mill, and that a package of the metal worth thirty dollars had been received at New Helvetia. Five weeks later the Star announced that its editor, E. C. Kemble, was about to take a trip into the country, and on his return would report his observations. He went to Colonia, and either saw nothing or understood nothing of what he saw, for he preserved absolute silence in his paper about his trip. On the 20th of May, after a number of men had left San Francisco for the mines, he came out with the opinion that the mines were a "sham," and that the people who had gone to them were "superlatively silly." The increasing production of the mines soon overwhelmed the doubters; and before the middle of June the whole territory resounded with the cry of "gold! gold!! gold!!!" as it was printed in one of the local newspapers. Nearly all the men hurried off to the mines. Workshops, stores, dwellings, wives and even fields of ripe grain were left for a time to take care of themselves.

Showers of Blood.

St. Louis Republic.]

Showers of blood from the sky are very rare in this day and age of the world, a fact which makes their comparatively common occurrence in the olden times only that much more extraordinary and unaccountable. In the "Annals of Remarkable Happenings in Rome" mention is made of 14 different showers of blood and other substances mixed between the years 319 A. D. and 1170. Besides these there were two "showers of much intensity, of which the liquid resembled pure blood, and was not intermixed with other matter, as heretofore reported." In 1222 we find record of a shower of blood and dust over the larger part of Italy. In 1226 snow fell in Syria, "which presently turned into large pools of gore." A monk who wrote in 1251 tells of a three days' shower of blood all over Southern Europe. In the same year a loaf freshly taken from the oven "did bleed like a new wound" when sliced at the table. In 1348 the great chasms made by the earthquake at Villach, Austria, "sent forth blood, and a great pestilence followed." Burgundy had a bloody shower in 1361, and Bedfordshire, England, witnessed the same phenomenon in 1450. In 1686 hailstones fell in Wartemburg which contained hollow cavities filled with blood. The last bloody shower on record occurred in Siam in 1802.

Wonders of Littleness.

Both Pliny and Elian relate that Myrmecido wrought out of ivory a chariot, with four wheels and four horses, and a ship, with all its tackling, both in so small a compass that a bee could hide in them. Nor should we doubt this when we find it recorded in English history, on less questionable authority, that in the twentieth year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, a blacksmith of London, of the name of Mark Scarliot, made a lock of iron, steel and brass, of eleven pieces, and a pipe key, all of which weighed only one grain. Scarliot also made a chain of gold of forty-three links, which he fastened to the lock and key, and put it around the neck of a flea, which drew the whole with perfect ease. The chain, key, lock and flea altogether weighed but one grain and a half.

DEATH OF GOV. FOWLE.

A telegram to this city yesterday morning announced the sudden death, at 11:30 o'clock on Tuesday night, at the Executive Mansion in Raleigh, of His Excellency Governor Daniel G. Fowle. The remains lay in state yesterday and to-day, surrounded by a military guard of honor, and the funeral services will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Strange to say, the Raleigh papers of yesterday have not a line with regard to this grave dispensation of Providence upon the affairs of the commonwealth, and our notice must consequently lack detail as to Gov. Fowle's closing hours and the manner of his death.

Daniel G. Fowle was a native of Washington, Beaufort county, N. C., and was about 65 years of age. Early in life he evinced the brilliancy of intellect and perspicacity of mind which made him easily a leader of men in his more mature years, and his ambition for the forensic triumphs of the cultured and scholarly career led him early to the study and practice of the law.

During the war he was invited by Zebulon Vance to take the position of Adjutant-General of North Carolina, and the great "War Governor of the South" found in this distinguished citizen, with his quick brain and decisive qualities, an invaluable colleague in the administration of the military affairs of the State at that troubled period.

Gov. Fowle was a member of the convention that passed the Ordinance of Secession, and received his appointment to the Superior Court bench in 1865, and it was perhaps in this position that his distinctively judicial abilities did justice best to his remarkable character—though his power on the rostrum and the hustings gained for him an affectionate appellation from the lips of the people, showing their high estimate of his rank as an orator. We wish that we could here recall and transmit to print the impassioned and eloquent tribute which came glowing from the tongue of Hon. C. M. Stedman in the court-house at Greensboro in 1888, bearing testimony to Judge Fowle as the ermined champion of the majesty and inviolability of the civil law—the bulwark of the sacredness of habeas corpus against the aggressions of military force and usurpation.

The gubernatorial campaign of 1888, which placed the deceased Chief Magistrate in the position so gratifying to a heart so rich as his in State pride, is too fresh in the minds of our readers to need rehearsal. That political fight was aggressive, the victory was sweeping, and the result in the redemption of the State was permanent. It was magnetized with the qualities of its leader—full of courage, nerve and patriotism; and these attributes—so noble in man, so especially noble in a public man—distinguished the administration of Gov. Fowle to the hour of his death.

DEATH OF COL. SAUNDERS.

Col. William L. Saunders, Secretary of State of North Carolina, died at Raleigh on the 2nd inst., a little over 55 years old—in age having reached only the prime of life; but all the days and the years of nearly half of that life were a physical martyrdom, passed in the endurance of such bodily anguish as wrings from the poor tossed and trembling soul the cry, with the coming of day: "Would God it were night!" and at night: "Would God it were morning!" But an unquenchable spirit held its throne in that racked frame, and never was his mind more brilliant, never were his services to his people more distinguished, than when God's afflictive hand drove the clouds about him darkest and densest. Confined through wearisome years, to the narrow domain of the invalid's couch and the cripple's rolling chair, no man got nearer to his fellow-man than the late Secretary of State, and no man more intimately identified himself with contemporaneous events.

The love of country, which made him a brave and faithful soldier, and won for him the wounds the scars of which went with him to the grave, sustained his magnanimous soul amid the "Reconstruction" perils which environed the commonwealth, widened his influence as an able and conscientious journalist, made him often the leader and always the trusted adviser of his party, and invested with authority and dignity his official position in the administration of public affairs.

But if his love for the South was deep and abiding his devotion to his State was conspicuous and unfaltering. He planned for her glory and labored for her advancement with all the powers of his active and well-furnished mind, and with almost his dying breath he praised and honored her. It were enough for one man to have given to posterity the "Colonial Records" and the "Defense of the Regulators," but his whole life was a record of patriotic service.

With our connection of more than twenty years with the North Carolina press, we knew no deeper thinker, no more forcible and incisive writer, than Col. Saunders, and it will be long ere his fellow-citizens cease to mourn his loss.

That genial Caledonian, Mr. A. D. Black, now residing at Kenansville, was here within the past few days, and has a lifetime right to feel at home among troops of his friends whenever he comes.

THE LATE GOVERNOR.

DEATH OF GOV. FOWLE.

Meeting of Citizens—Passage of Resolutions—Delegates Selected to Attend the Funeral.

Pursuant to a call issued by Maj. A. A. McKethan, acting mayor of the city, a large body of the citizens of Fayetteville and the county met in the Town Hall at 12 M. yesterday, for the purpose of taking appropriate action expressive of the sorrow of the community at the intelligence of the death of the Chief Magistrate of the State.

On motion of Maj. McKethan, Hon. J. C. MacRae was called to the chair, and Messrs. H. L. Cook and Z. W. Whitehead were requested to act as secretaries.

Mr. T. H. Sutton—accompanying them with a graceful tribute to the abilities and distinguished services of the deceased, and speaking feelingly of his friendship for the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry—offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted by a rising vote, appropriate and eloquent remarks having been made previous to the vote by Hon. R. P. Buxton and Mr. H. McD. Robinson;

WHEREAS, The people of Fayetteville, in meeting assembled, desire to express their deep sense of the affliction which has fallen upon the State and people of North Carolina in the sudden death of His Excellency DANIEL G. FOWLE, their Governor; therefore

Resolved, That their heartfelt sympathy is hereby offered to their fellow-citizens throughout the State who, to-day, are bowed down in a common grief, and more especially to the stricken family of the distinguished dead.

Resolved, That the Mayor pro tem. be requested to take order for the representation of this town at the funeral obsequies; that the flags, public and private, be displayed at half-mast; that the market and church bells be tolled, and that business be suspended during the funeral, in token of the sorrow of the people at the loss of their Chief Magistrate.

Resolved, That the chairman of this meeting be directed to communicate the substance of these resolutions by telegraph to the Executive Department at Raleigh.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the Raleigh and the Fayetteville papers, and a copy of the same be sent to the family of the deceased.

As authorized by the resolutions adopted, the Mayor appointed, as a committee to ascertain the facts with regard to transportation to Raleigh, and report at the afternoon meeting, the following: Messrs. T. H. Sutton, G. M. Rose.

On motion, the meeting adjourned, to meet at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

At the afternoon meeting a detachment of 28 men of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry, together with many prominent citizens, expressed a readiness to attend the funeral services in Raleigh, provided transportation on railway could be arranged.

A subsequent meeting was called for last evening at 8:30 o'clock, the proceedings of which we are unable to report, and go to press in time for first out-going mails.

An Act of Heroism.

Mr. O. A. Wiggins, of Wilmington, N. C., makes the following tribute to the dauntless bravery of the lamented Charles T. Haigh, which will thrill the hearts of all who read the graphic lines:

In yours of the 26th ult. I read with great interest "A Message, As It Were, from the Dead;" old soldiers like to read of such things. Charles T. Haigh joined the 37th N. C. Regiment in the spring of 1864. His company was upon the left of my company, he having been appointed a lieutenant in Company B. The very first day of reception in our camp a mutual admiration seemed to spring up between us; it day by day increased into warm friendship, until I honestly believe we loved each other like brothers.

On the 12th of May, after having borne our full share early in the morning in the "bloody angle," we were moved in rear of the court-house where Gen. Lee sat upon the old gray, surrounded by many of his general officers. At about 4 P. M. we were ordered under his immediate directions across our works, and formed line of battle at right angle to our works, with Mahon's brigade as a support. We had hardly formed line before a courier rushed up, and told Gen. Lane that Gen. Lee ordered him to advance at once. Never to my dying day shall I forget our move through the oak woods in our front—how we joked by popping the young hickory leaves at each other. Entering an open field, we confronted a battery of six guns which opened upon us as soon as we emerged from the wood. As a natural consequence the regiment wavered badly, and I think would have left the field but for the action of this true christian soldier and noble boy, Chas. T. Haigh.

I saw him take his hat off, and rush twenty yards in front of his regiment. This was the turning point. The regiment rushed forward, and captured the battery, killing every man in it. Gen. Lane in his official report says: "The grandest sight I ever saw was the charge of the 37th N. C. Regiment upon a battery in an open field." I tried to keep close to Charlie in this fight, but I shall never cease to regret it, for it was my misfortune to see my friend shot down by my side. So long as life remains in my body I intend to sing his praise. "Honor to whom honor is due." I am an old soldier, and passed through most of the battles with the army of Northern Virginia, and I solemnly state I never witnessed such heroism on a battle-field as was shown by Charlie Haigh on the evening of May 12th, 1864.

ORGANIZING FOR REVENGE.

Alleged Italian Plot to Capture Pittsburg, and Move on New Orleans.

NEW CASTLE, PA., April 6th.—Sebastian Gabarrio, leader of the 350 Italians employed near Wampum, Pa., told a strange story last Friday, which he said should be communicated to the authorities at once. Gabarrio is a property-owner in Wampum, and seems to place considerable weight upon the information imparted.

He said that yesterday a strange Italian who resided in Pittsburg called him aside, and asked him if he would go into a plot to avenge his countrymen who had been killed at New Orleans. The stranger, who refused to give his name, said that at least 20,000 Italians could be brought into Pittsburg in five hours' time, and with the aid of guns and by surprising the citizens they would be able to take the city without much trouble. He strongly urged Gabarrio to get the Italians at Wampum to consent to meet the others in Pittsburg at a given signal.

He then went on to tell how every Italian settlement in Allegheny and Beaver counties was receiving the same information, and how each settlement was expected to send a large delegation. He stated also that a movement of that kind was to be started all over the country. In the afternoon the Pittsburg envoy left for Carbon, to stir up the Italians there, and said that a secret meeting was to be held in the near future to talk the matter over among themselves. There are 400 or 500 Italians at Carbon, and it is known that at least a half-dozen of them are members of the Mafia.

Gabarrio is a naturalized citizen of the United States, and will prevent such a plot in this section.

A dispatch from Wheeling states that 2,000 Italians near Moundsville, now employed on the railroad, and who have been drilling, intend to go to New Orleans, though for what purpose they refuse to state.

Whatever of truth there may be in the reports from New Castle and Wheeling as to an attack on Pittsburg in case of trouble between this country and Italy, one thing is certain: for the past week an unusual number of Italians have been arriving in this city daily, and to-day squads of twenty and thirty were unusually numerous. The police department has been quietly at work, and has secured a list of several hundred Italian boarding-houses, and the daily invoice of strangers is under strict supervision.

Opened Fire on the American Flag.

KINGSTON, N. Y., April 4.—A dispatch from LeFevre Falls states that considerable excitement exists over the outrageous acts of a number of Italians employed in a quarry there. The Italians in question recently held a meeting, and adopted resolutions roundly denouncing the outrageous conduct of the mob at New Orleans, and American institutions in general.

To emphasize their displeasure with the people and government of the United States, the Italians hoisted an American flag on a high pole, and then riddled it with bullets. The quarry owners, hearing of this, instantly discharged the men.

Most of the Italians have since left the place.

In a New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A Sinclair have removed from Haymount to Capt. Alex. Campbell's house on Rowan street—a nice residence in a nice neighborhood.

Evangelist Fife in Raleigh.

The Raleigh papers announce that Mr. W. P. Fife will commence a series of religious meetings in that city next Sunday, 12th inst., in the Edenton Street Methodist Church, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. Mr. Fife's time will be pretty steadily occupied in evangelistic work from next Sunday until the 25th of May.

The Truck Market.

In spite of the serious obstacles thrown by the unpropitious season in the way of effective work, our truck gardeners manage to make a decent showing to allay the stomachic craving of the spring customer for "garden sass"—the same yearning as that which besets the sailor on shore after a long sea voyage, and described by Welch in Reade's "Foul Play" as "nature calling out for greens."

Young turnips, shallots, green cabbage, spinach, kale and lettuce have been on the market in fair supply, while now and then the housekeeper can get very nice asparagus and radishes. The market has not been entirely without Florida cabbage and tomatoes, but the quantity has been small.

We'd Beautify Our Complexion, Too.

The Scottish Chief of Red Springs finds other than purely medicinal virtues in its mineral waters, and gives its discovery to the public in the following paragraph:

It has often been remarked that the Red Springs ladies have fine complexions, and that they are notably handsome. In addition to being handsome naturally, this argus-eyed Chief reporter finds that the clearness of their complexions can be largely attributed to their frequent visits to the Mineral Springs. It is no uncommon sight to see a bevy of beautiful girls at the spring before breakfast drinking its exhilarating waters, and hence rosy cheeks are a natural consequence.

We never were much "struck" on early rising—not being sufficiently fond of the worm to care to emulate the matutinal bird--but if we lived in the Chief's charming town "full many a time and oft" would we greet the rising sun, with "metal so attractive" to make fair pictures in the pellucid depths of the health-giving spring.

For Mayor of Red Springs.

Scottish Chief.]

In looking over the town for a gentleman to fill the office of mayor at the approaching election, which is to come off the first Monday in May, the Chief presents the name of Mr. Peter McQueen, believing him to be qualified, and knowing him to be worthy.

Girls' Normal and Industrial School.

News and Observer.]

We learn that the State Superintendent of Public Instruction is in receipt of letters from several points which will make propositions concerning the normal and industrial school for white girls. Marion makes an offer of $12,000, and its people declare that if necessary they will increase this to $17,000. Other points heard from are High Point, Durham, Thomasville and Guilford College. Some other places are considering the matter of issuing bonds or making appropriations to secure the location.

The Direct Tax.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Treasury officials are considering the best method of settling the direct tax claims of individuals in those States where the tax was collected directly by United States officers. The act provides that in such cases the money in settlement of direct tax claims shall be paid to the Governors of the States in trust for the claimants. It so happens, however, that the records of these collections are in the custody of the government, and that the Governors have no record information on the subject. Several ways out of the difficulty have been suggested, and the one most likely to be adopted is for the Governors to appoint agents to make a transcript of the government records, and for the Governors to settle the claims in accordance therewith. Under this plan the States would be allowed to retain all that portion of its allotment for which claims shall not be presented within six years from the date of the passage of the act. Applications for their share have been already received from three States in which a portion or all of the tax was collected by the Federal officers. These are West Virginia, Delaware and North Carolina. In the last-named State the entire tax was collected by the government directly from the citizens, and the same is true of all the Southern States.

The Trouble with Italy.

ROME, April 2.—In a long interview with the Marquis di Rudini, Minister Porter stated that the United States Government is willing to materially compensate the families of the New Orleans victims, but that it is impossible for the Washington Government to place the lynchers on trial, that being a matter for the grand jury in New Orleans to decide. The Premier insisted that Italy's dignity demanded that the culprits should be punished.

All endeavors to obtain the opinions upon the present crisis between the United States and Italy of Hon. A. G. Porter, United States Minister here, have proved futile. He declares that the rules of international comity preclude an expression of opinion by a Minister, placed in the position that he is now placed in. It is learned, however, from reliable sources that the United States Minister has done much to pacify the Italian Government, and that he has won over to his way of thinking other ministers, several of whom have been trying to induce the Italian Premier to be less hasty.

The idea of war is scouted here in diplomatic and government circles. Even Baron Fava's final withdrawal is not definitely decided upon. It is said that even if he is withdrawn, it will be done only as the most forcible protest known in diplomacy, and not as the forerunner of a conflict between the United States and Italy.

The Italian Cabinet Ministers are in receipt of a number of cablegrams and letters from prominent Italians in New York City urging moderation upon the Italian Government in its treatment of the New Orleans trouble.

ROME, April 2.—Premier Rudini to-day telegraphed to Imperiali, Secretary of Legation at Washington, instructing him to hand a message to Secretary Blaine.

The message is a reply to Mr. Blaine's last note, and in it he says that Italy has asked nothing but prompt institution of regular judicial proceedings against the guilty parties of New Orleans. He adds that it would have been absurd to claim punishment for the offenders without the guarantees afforded by a regular trial. Diplomatic incident, Rudini says, can only be considered closed when the Federal Government has declared in precise terms that prosecutions will be commenced. In the meantime, the Italian Government takes cognizance of the Federal Government's declaration acknowledging the fact that compensation is due to the families of the victims by virtue of the treaty existing between the two countries.

Young Men's Christian Association.

At the annual meeting of the State Association in Durham a collection was taken up for the State work, and $3,500 was raised.

The terms of five members of the State Executive Committee expiring this year, the following gentlemen were elected to succeed them for 3 years: Dr. Thos. Hume, Chapel Hill; P. B. Manning, Wilmington; William Black, Maxton; C. W. Tillett, W. C. Dowd, Charlotte. The State Secretary was made a member of the State Executive Committee, with five as a quorum.

The figures below will give some idea of the progress that has been made by the Young Men's Christian Association since 1888:

	1888.	1891.
Associations reporting,	24	53
Membership,	1,797	5,726 *
Points employing salaried officers,	2	11
Salaried officers,	2	12*
Buildings,	1	3
Buildings in course of erection,	—	1
Value of furnishings,	$1,635	$13,022
Annual expenses,	3,652	10,414

The next session will be held in Greensboro in 1891.

*And two vacancies.

The "Queenly City."

Prof. H. C. Dunn, writing to the Concord Standard from this place at the close of the State Sunday-school Convention, pays the following graceful tribute to the city and its people:

One is charmed with the cordial, graceful and naturally easy hospitality of Fayetteville. It is much like going home; you feel that there had been a disappointed family had you failed to put in an appearance at the time appointed. Certainly the Bible rule of hospitality is beautifully illustrated in this queenly city. On adjourning, the feeling was: "Let's meet here next year."

The expression of one who has attended all our State Sunday-school conventions since 1887 was that this has been the best in work and results. All went away feeling determined to do better work for the Master, using the new methods learned, applying themselves with a new energy and increased power to their work, and a feeling that these days of association and taking counsel together will be a continued benediction.

A Skeleton Turned Up.

Raleigh Chronicle.]

A few days ago, while the force was at work widening the railroad gap at Mr. Boylan's bridge, preparing new tracks for the new depot, a skeleton head was found and taken from its long grave. When the North Carolina Road was first built one or more skeletons were exhumed in digging the excavation at the same place. These skeletons were supposed to be those of criminals hung in colonial times for horse-stealing.

A Raleigh virtuoso took the temple bone of the supposed criminal home in his pocket, and will use it as a piece of bric-a-brac to ornament his parlor.

This shows the great use to which a man may be put—after he is dead. It is another illustration of Shakspeare's comment, which ran something like this:

"Imperial Cæsar dead and turned to clay
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away."

Two Bears Killed.

Washington Progress, 24th ult.]

On Saturday evening, the 21st inst., Messrs. Nash Edwards, Franklin Edwards, Harvey Edwards and S. Spear were hunting about five miles from Chocowinity. Their dogs jumped two large black bears, male and female. The female took to a tree, but the male bear bade defiance to the dogs, and in a short while he had laid two of the best curs dead at his feet. The hunters began to fire upon the infuriated beasts, which, being maddened by the attack of the shot, plunged here and there after the dogs. The shot finally did the work, and the hunters returned home, bringing the hides and paws of bruin and his mate.

A Delightful Concert.

The music-loving public (and all the public are music-loving; for "music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, to tickle beauty's ear, and lull the sage to rest"—or words to that effect) were charmed and delighted with the entertainment afforded to them by the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry Band in Farmers' Hall last Friday evening. Connoisseurs in music say that they have heard nothing in Fayetteville surpassing it, outside of the Marine Band, and that one or two selections given by it during the Centennial Celebration of November, 1889, were equally as finely rendered the other night. Mr. H. L. Cook, when presenting his prize; at the 22nd of February celebration, to Mr. Chas. J. Ahearn, was dealing in no hyperbole in assuring the latter that he belonged to the finest organization of the kind in the State.

A Bovine Treasure.

Major W. F. Campbell stepped out of the Thornton store on Monday morning last, coming greeting us with what we at first supposed to be a mass of molten gold in a chafing-dish; and we thought that he had been out to the old "Chaffin place" (where so much wealth was supposed to be buried a few years ago), and had beaten the record by unearthing the biggest nugget yet. But it was a pat of rich, yellow butter (deep-tinted only with nature's pure coloring), contributed by his thoroughbred registered Jersey cow—now kept and tended for him by Maj. Jno. Evans—which is only three years old, has her first calf, gives 10 quarts of milk at each milking, and furnishes 1¼ lbs. of butter every day.

There's a cow for you!

Origin of the Mafia.

Crime-stained as it is to-day, and ghastly with murder every step of its tortuous, secret career, the "Mafia" sprang into being from an inspiration of patriotism, but its very birth was heralded by a libation of blood.

Many years ago we read its story in an English magazine (if our recollection is faithful), and that recollection is freshened by a recent communication in the St. Louis Republic, though our remembrance of the incidents differs somewhat from the narrative of the St. Louis correspondent.

The "Mafia" society is over six hundred years old, having its origin at the revolt of Palermo, which took place during an Easter ceremonial in the suburbs of that city in the year 1282. A beautiful young girl and her betrothed, in accordance with the quaint and primitive customs of that people, approached the Church of the Holy Ghost to be united in marriage at its altar; and, while the lover sought the venerable padre in the little room at the rear of the building, his bride paused upon its threshold. As she stood expectant—graceful as a fawn, fair as a dream, her innocent heart throbbing with its new-born happiness—a drunken sergeant of the French garrison, Druet by name, strode up behind her, threw his arm about her waist, and thrust a huge, brutal hand into her pure, snowy bosom. With a cry of horror and fear, the poor child tore herself from his polluting grasp, and turned to fly; but the heel of her dainty slipper caught in the coping of the stone pavement, and she fell, striking her head against a sharp projection of the church cornice.

At that instant the returning lover's eyes fell upon his beautiful mistress—lying lifeless, her white brow gaping with its cruel wound, her long tresses dabbled with her blood. With the savage fury of a wild beast he threw himself upon Druet, bore him to the earth, and drove his stiletto to the wretch's heart, crying: "Morte alla Francia!" "Death to the French!" There was a moment, a pause, of silence, and then that maddened cry became the roar of infuriated thousands. It swelled and deepened; it took more solemn meaning—became nationalized—and then burst forth: "Morte alla Francia Italia anela!" "Death to the French is Italy's cry!" For seventy-two hours armed bands, headed by the father and betrothed of the hapless girl, hunted down the hated French, and their search was as the quest of the tiger and the bloodhound.

But retribution was to come after this carnival of blood, and, in dread of the vengeance of the French nation, these unhappy people formed themselves into secret organizations, with the pass-word and name of the society made up of the initial letters of the words which compose that fateful death-cry, thus forming "Mafia." Its object was resistance to oppression, and, as the lapse of years added to its power and influence, it stretched forth its hand against the rich and mighty in behalf of the poor and the downtrodden. To day it is but the hideous cloak of the creeping thug and the assassin of the night.

On the Honor Roll.

At a recent meeting of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry the following was most heartily ratified:

Messrs. J. A. Green, A. D. McGill and Thos. H. Sutton:

GENTLEMEN:—At a meeting of the Fayetteville Independent Light Infantry, held at its armory on Monday, the 7th of March, 1891, the undersigned were appointed a committee to thank you for your successful efforts in securing special legislation for the benefit of our grand old company. We beg to inform you that while "we have no enemies to punish we have friends to reward." Mr. Sutton being already a member of this organization, in consideration of the faithful and efficient manner in which you have looked after the interest of our time-honored old company—still proud to wear the uniform of our fathers—it is with peculiar pride and great pleasure that we write the names of J. A. Green and A. D. McGill upon our roll of life-members as worthy to be placed with the illustrious names which precede them. We beg to express our appreciation of all the members of the late legislature who so kindly and promptly seconded your efforts in our behalf.

With sentiments of profound esteem and with a deep sense of gratitude, we have the honor to subscribe ourselves,

Your friends,
W. F. CAMPBELL,
J. G. SHAW,
E. L. PEMBERTON.

Treason Unearthed.

All unconscious, the people of North Carolina have been slumberling upon the brink of an earthquake, a volcano, a war, a revolution, a conspiracy worse than that of Burr and Blannerhassett—and it has only been brought to light by Joe Caldwell, of the Statesville Landmark, turning State's evidence.

The plot was for a part of North Carolina to secede, and form a new State; and Dr. Scott, who has been engineering this dark treason against the administration, had promised the State printing to Caldwell when the new commonwealth was established. Subsequently—in order to gain as many adherents as possible—Dr. Scott held up the same dazzling bribe before the eyes of the Durham Globe man, putting Caldwell off with the pledge that he should be Governor at the second term; but the latter turned up his nose at second-hand gubernatorial garments, and "blew on" the whole thing the other day.

If Brother Caldwell is ambitious to win undying fame in this kind of insurrectionary proceedings let him cross over into the neighboring "State of Wilkes," and form a "triple alliance" with Tyre Yorke and the "red fox." He can name the State "Joe," and it will be Called well (no pun intended, s'help us!).

Jurors.

The following good men and true were drawn at the last meeting of the county commissioners to serve as jurors at the May term of the Superior Court of Cumberland county:

FIRST WEEK.

M. J. McKay, J. T. Tolar, I. F. Skipper, J. H. Fields, Chas. Lee, J. R. Kinlaw, J. C. Williford, T. J. Young, Frank B. Beasley, Alex. Horne, W. J. Robinson, Duncan Smith, David McPherson, A. S. Carter, G. W. House, J. B. Broadfoot, Evander Patterson, Albert J. Hall, J. A. Williford, D. E. Bain, Norman McDiarmid, J. O. Boone, W. J. Johnson, W. J. Nance, Blackman Sessoms, L. C. Johnson, H. G. Bullock, D. J. Bullard, James Sims, G. B. Holmes, W. G. Holmes, V. B. Autry, T. J. Pattisall, H. B. Simpson, J. D. West, Frank Butler.

SECOND WEEK.

Love Culbreth, W. R. Hair, Mariam Jackson, W. L. Nunnale, T. J. Smith, M. C. Cashwell, H. H. Wheeler, Ras Cain, D. G. McFadyen, Wiley Williams, E. P. Jessup, A. J. Bethune, David T. Evans, C. C. McLellan, David Sessoms, D. C. Godwin, Daniel King, D. A. Geddy.

Mr. Fife's Great Work.

Writing the Western North Carolina Methodist from Lincolnton, Rev. J. F. Austin has this to say of the lasting good of Evangelist Fife's work in that place last year:

"Last summer Mr. Fife, the "drummer evangelist," visited the town of Lincolnton, and accomplished great good. The effects of his meeting are still quite visible. Drunkards were reformed, dancing has ceased, the billiard and card-tables have been set aside, and many once sad hearts are now rejoicing over the reformation of a reckless father, husband, son or brother. The religion of our Lord Jesus Christ is the only substantial remedy for the many heart-crushing evils of life."

The Winston Daily of this week says the people of that live town are moving in the direction of securing the services of Mr. Fife for a ten days' meeting there.

A BOON TO THE SICK.

Dr. King's Royal Germetuer is endorsed by Rev. J. B. Hawthorne, pastor First Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga., who says: "It is a great remedy." Rev. Sam P. Jones says: "I wish every poor suffering wife had access to that medicine." Thousands of others attest its virtues. Fifty gallons are drunk in Atlanta daily, where it is performing remarkable cures. It removes the cause of disease and builds up from the first dose. Send stamp for full particulars, certificates of wonderful cures, etc., to King's Royal Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga. IT CURES WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS. Price, $1.50 per concentrated bottle, which makes one gallon of medicine as per directions accompanying each bottle. Can be sent by express C. O. D. if your druggist cannot supply you.

The reason RADAM'S MICROBE KILLER is the most wonderful medicine is because it has never failed in any instance, no matter what the disease, from LEPROSY to the simplest disease known to the human system.

The scientific men of to-day claim and prove that every disease is

CAUSED BY MICROBES,

—AND—

RADAM'S MICROBE KILLER

Exterminates the Microbes and drives them out of the system, and when that is done you cannot have an ache or pain. No matter what the disease, whether a simple case of Malaria Fever or a combination of diseases, we cure them all at the same time, as we treat all diseases constitutionally.

Asthma, Consumption, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Disease, Chills and Fevers, Female Troubles in all its forms, and, in fact, every Disease known to the Human System.

NO QUARTER.

A sage once said to me:
"Of two things warn I thee,
And one thing is Death.
No skill can stay his arm,
'Gainst him avails no charm,
Prayers are but wasted breath.

"When death is standing near
All vain is friendship's tear
Or love's wild woe;
Then turn thee to the wall,
Away from friends and all,
Only to wait his blow.

"That other thing is Want,
Potent the soul to daunt,
To curse and blight;
On him that hath no gold
The very sun shines cold,
And maketh no day bright.

"Friends wail to see thee die;
From poverty they fly,
Nor heed its call.
Who dies hath lived his day;
The poor can truly say:
We have not lived at all!"

HIS REGRET.

In a moment unguarded I stole a sweet kiss;
Pray, how could I help it? And yet, dear, for this
You chide me, and bid me, with bright, angry eyes,
To offer at once, if your friendship I prize,
An apology humble. Dear girl, it is here—
(And I beg to assure you my words are sincere),
I own I was wrong—my offense I deplore—
And I'm sorry—so sorry—
I didn't take more!

Effect of Removing the Tassels of Corn.

Cornell Bulletin, Experiment Station.]

It has been claimed that if the tassels were removed from corn before they have produced pollen the strength thus saved to the plant would be turned to the ovaries, and a larger amount of grain be produced. To test the effect of this theory the following trial was made during the past season:

In the general corn-field a plat of 48 rows was selected for the experiment. From each alternate row the tassels were removed as soon as they appeared, and before any pollen had fallen. The remaining rows were left undisturbed.

On July 21st, 25th, 28th and August 4th the plat was gone over, at the end of which time all the tassels were removed. A slight pull was sufficient to break the stalk just below the tassel, and the removal was easy and rapid.

The corn was allowed to stand without cutting until ripe. On September 29th to October 1st the rows were cut and husked, and the stalks and ears weighed and counted, with the following results:

	Aggregate Yield.	Com. Yield.
	Tassels left on.	Tassels removed.	Tassels left on.	Tassels removed.
Number of good ears,	1,551	2,348	100	151
Number of poor ears,	628	885	100	141
Number of abortive ears.	2,566	951	100	37
Total number of ears,	4,745	4,174	100	88
Weight of merchantable corn, lbs.,	710	1,078	100	152
Weight of poor corn, lbs.,	130	187	100	144
Number of stalks,	4,186	4,228	100	101
100 stalks weighed, lbs.,	82	79	100	96

It will thus be seen that the number of good ears and the weight of merchantable corn were both a little more than fifty per cent. greater on those rows from which the tassels were taken. This is not only true of the two sets of rows as a whole but with the individual rows as well. In no case did a row upon which the tassels were left produce anywhere near as much as the tasseled rows on either side of it. In fact, the results given above are really the aggregate results of twenty-four distinct duplicate experiments, each of which alone showed the same thing as the aggregate of all.

By abortive ears is meant those "sets" that made only a bunch of husks, and sometimes a small cob, but no grain. It will be noticed that they were by far the most numerous on those rows from which the tassels were not removed. It will also be noticed that the total of the good, poor and abortive ears is about fourteen per cent. on the rows on which the tassels were left, while the weight of merchantable corn is more than fifty per cent. greater on those rows from which the tassels were removed.

Making Soil More Porous.

American Cultivator.]

One of the greatest advantages of underdraining is in its effect of increasing porosity of the soil. Wet land never freezes very deeply, as the stratum of water near the surface turns into ice and prevents further progress of cold downward. Remove this surplus water, and the moist soil expands as its moisture freezes. This raises it, and when the soil thaws the soil remains a little higher than before. Each year this freezing goes a little deeper until it gets to the frost line in the coldest weather, usually two to three feet deep. This is the depth at which the underdrain must be laid to be permanent, as in shallow drains frost quickly displaces either tile or stone watercourses.

Proper Time for Feeding.

The farmer who is up and at the barn before daylight in the winter, to give his stock a hurried morning feed before he goes away to the day's work at mill or market, will no doubt find them requiring another feed at noon, and again another after his day's labor is done. On the contrary, the farmer who does not go to the barn until after daylight, and who feeds leisurely, adding a little more as they eat what is put before them, until their appetites are satisfied, will not need to feed again until in the afternoon, when the same course of feeding will furnish them enough to last until morning. Probably this method will keep the cattle in quite as good condition upon less food than would be used by the other method.

The Cheapest Meat.

American Cultivator.]

Most farmers know that young animals grow faster from the food consumed than they do after they pa s their second year. With pigs and sheep a shorter time suffices to attain a limit of profitable growth. The meat of lambs is higher in price, and has cost its owner less to produce. Sheep for breeding may be kept five years. After that they, too, should be fattened, as keeping longer will result in more or less dying every year from indigestion, as their teeth become poor. Young hogs that weigh 150 to 200 pounds find ready sale, and at better prices per hundred than the overgrown porkers starved one year, when there is most profit in good feeding, and fattened the next, when there is least.

Water for Hogs.

Many fattening hogs often suffer from lack of pure water. Milk is sometimes given as drink, but it is too solid, and does not assuage thirst as water does. Dish-water, that fills so much of the swill-barrel, is often quite salty, and makes them more thirsty than they were before.

☞ An experiment at the New Hampshire Experiment Station showed that the cost of a quart of milk from the best cow was a little over one and a half cents, while a quart from the poorest cow on the same rations costs a little over four and a half cents.
